ROMAN VELITES

Agema Miniatures is a new company promising plastic armies for the Punic Wars. Their first release is a set of Roman velites, the skirmish troops of the Roman Republic. Armed only with javelins and a sword, they would harass the enemy before falling back. In the box you'll find sixteen models on eight sprues, two models per sprue. Two weapon options are provided, one throwing a javelin and a second with sword, and two round shields are included as well, one with extra javelins. There are three heads, two helmeted and one with the classic velite wolfskin head-dress, giving some variation. The models themselves are well sculpted and pleasing to the eye, but more variation would have been welcome (and as spares, as I'm wont to lose parts during construction!). The price is good and these will be ideal for anyone looking for some ancient light troops. We look forward to legionaries and perhaps some Carthaginian enemies?

WARS OF THE ROSES TRANSFERS

CitadelSix is a new company specializing in heraldry decals for the fantasy and historical wargamer. They offer decals for the First Crusade (including Hospitaller and Templar Orders), Edward I, Agincourt, and the Wars of the Roses in 28mm. In 15mm, they offer decals for the Third Crusade (including Hospitaller and Templar Orders). You can even design your own on commission. The Wars of the Roses collection is extensive and includes banners as well as personal livery. Each transfer pack contains detailed instructions for the application of the transfers and where they should be placed on the model, including the basic colour of the livery. The Houses of York and Lancaster are extensively covered, with no less than 34 livery and flag variations for the Yorkists and 29 for the Lancastrians! You'll find each sheet contains enough livery for 60 billman or bowman models. This is a clever and innovative idea from CitadelSix to bring more life to your Medieval armies, while easing the burden of painting complex livery.
